Office Action Summary

Art Unit 1714

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. § 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 27-33 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 103(a) as being unpatentable over Winn '009 or Kamel '924 or Fan '205 or Sahatjian '516 or Murayama '211 or Opolski '012 or Shimura '488 or Fan '899 or Fan '738 or Onishi '588 or Whitbourne '517. Applicants' claims are directed to a process for coating a "device" comprising contacting the surface with a carboxy polymer and a coupling agent. All of these references disclose or suggest applying compositions of carboxyl polymer and materials which qualify as "coupling agent" to the surface of devices. See the Abstract and claim 1 of each of these references. It would be obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to apply a composition of carboxyl polymer and a material in these references which qualifies as coupling agent to the surface of a device. The motivation is that the use of polymer together with material which qualifies as coupling agent is suggested by these references.

Art Unit 1714

Claims 27-33 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. § 103(a) as being unpatentable over Hammond '672 or Dollman '596 or Yamasoe '359 or Gregor '873 or Nadkarni '035 or Jones '107 or Kramer '436. All of these references disclose the application of carboxyl polymers and materials which qualify as "coupling agent" to the surface of devices. Applicants do not define "biomedical device" either in the specification or in the claims. Any article can theoretically be used in a biomedical situation and thereby considered to be a "biomedical device". Therefore, the Examiner is taking the position that all of the devices or substrates shown by these references qualify as "biomedical device". It would be obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to apply a composition comprising carboxyl polymer and a material which qualifies as "coupling agent" to the disclosed devices or substrates shown by these references. See the Abstract and claim 1 of each reference.
